“An enjoyable thriller. . . Polelle rewards readers with uncertainty in every chapter. Leone’s Rome is a dangerous place with a masked attacker around virtually every corner. And that’s what makes it fun to visit.” —Kirkus Reviews.

“A fast-paced thriller, very much in keeping with The Da Vinci Code. An enjoyable ride.” —The Wishing Shelf Book Award.

“Things done ‘in the name of religion’ have brought out both the best and worst of humankind. The ‘whatifs’ in this book are real possibilities—ancient legacies that may someday be uncovered and reshape the perceptions of the past and ancestral faiths.” —Dr. Steven Derfler, Emeritus Professor, Joint Doctorate in Classics and Archaeology (University Of Minnesota).
